

FIRST TERM

1957-58

Some pictorial highlights

Asian flu invaded the campus in mid-October and laid the student body low. At the left, a typical scene in the student houses, recorded at the height of the plague by a daring student photographer.

The Pajamarino, a Caltech tradition that was abandoned in 1953 came back this year in all its old-fashioned glory, replete with pajamas, parading, bonfire, song-queens and yells.

Biggest thing about this year's Interhouse Dance—Throop Club's 36-foot Eiffel Tower.

Freshmen grope through intricacies of initiation.

Sophomore goes through stately measures of Mudeo.

Coach LaBrucherie is carried away as Caltech beats Occidental (27-14) for the first time since 1946.
